PERFORMANCE COMMENTARY

Global markets roared through the first half of September, only to give up their gains in the latter half as risks ticked up. Global property values slumped as US mortgage rates jumped to their highest levels since 2008 (>6%). US inflation data surprised to the upside and the Fed decided to hike base rates by another 75 bps. Interest rate differentials fuelled dollar dominance and the GBP fell to its weakest level against the USD since 1985, having lost 20% against the dollar in its worst year since 2008 (worse than after the Brexit vote). In debt markets, the US 2y/30y T-bill yield premium jumped to its highest level since 2000. Brent crude oil fell below $85 for the first time since January and, surprisingly, survived Vladimir Putin's mobilisation of 300 000 troops to aid his annexation of parts of the Ukraine. The Bank of Canada and the European Central Bank raised their key rates by 75 bps, to 3.25% and 1.25%, respectively.

Fed rate-hike expectations in the futures market suggest a benchmark rate of 4.50% in March 2023 before the Fed cuts rates by 50 bps. Policy makers still find themselves between inflation's rock and recession's hard place, though the soft landing's replacement with a "growth recession" is likely to set the tone for further euphemisms. The current status quo should shift policy-maker focus further to fiscal intervention (e.g. China and Europe) and could underpin a future tailwind narrative for global risky assets. While tensions around Taiwan and Russia and a looming alliance between Xi Jinping and Vladimir Putin are possible geopolitical risks, very bearish net positioning tells a story of depressed sentiment with a great deal of bad news already priced in. A recovering underlying global economy, relatively risk-averse net positioning and anchored long-term inflation expectations should set a promising foundation for conservative upside potential going forward as fundamentals replace fear as the driver of market pricing.

The FTSE/JSE CAPPED SWIX Index fell by 3.8%, Industrials were down 6.5% and Financials decreased by 6.2%. The JSE All Bond Index declined by 2.1%, while the rand depreciated by 5.4% relative to the US dollar.
